The contractor will need to trench a 4" conduit, 4' deep starting at the Nordic box on the south side of the south drive at the Joe Schmitt residence. Trench north approximately 477' to approximately 30' north of the north driveway. Trenching will need to be under both the north and south driveways and extend to the area north of the north driveway where the city will set a pole. If trenching is through the drives, the contractor will need to pack and repair. The contractor will need to place pipe and tracing tape in the trench. Tracing tape will need to be 2' above conduit. There will be conduit coming out of the Nordic box on the south side of the driveway. This hole will need to be left open for a while. The contractor will be trenching next to an existing conduit. Trenching will be approximately 477'.

Cunningham may need to be contacted as well as they may need to lay conduit in this trench.

The City of Beloit will supply all the material, pole, pipe and tracing tape. The city will be getting a 20' easement and will dictate where the contractor will trench in the easement. There is a water line and possibly a sewer line in this area.

For more information call the city of Beloit's Systems Operation and ask for Ron Sporleder or Allen Mong 785-738-3781.

Trenching bids will need to be submitted by May 1, 2015.

“ The project, spearheaded by well-known developer Rick Worner, would encompass 105 acres of land along Kellogg, just west of Goddard Galleria, where the new Walmart Supercenter is set to open in two months. Worner's plan envisions Olympic training venues — or some other attraction — that would double as tourist destination sites, driving millions of dollars in related commercial development in the immediate area.

Key to the proposal is STAR bond financing, which would capture state and local sales tax revenues from the site and other nearby developments, and pump that money back into the project. Monday night, the Goddard City Council
